Press Release:

New Bookworm Graces the Grounds at the Downtown Library

There's something new at the Rapid City Public Library Downtown (610 Quincy Street).

Truth be told, there's always something new at the library -- it's one of the happening spots in Rapid City. But this week's "something new" is particularly exciting, a bookworm sculpture at the southwest corner of the downtown library grounds. Artist Tim Amos, of Amos Wildlife Chainsaw Carvings, brought his talents to bear on an unsightly tree stump, carving it and then painting it, unveiling a charming little green bookworm purposefully headed towards the library doors. It's the perfect addition to precede this year's Summer Reading Program which will have a "Catch the Reading Bug" theme. Look for a contest to name the bookworm later this year.
